

SAH Connects - Indigenous Women in Architecture in the US and Canada
#	Question	Asker Name	Answer
1	This is a question for Cynthia, during your time at Sandia Labs, did you participate in any of the tribal strategic energy planning Sandia assisted with? Thank you so much for sharing. (former Lobo and Sandian myself)	Veronique Arguello
2	How do you see non-indigenous created spaces fitting in with your histories? Particularly when these spaces may represent difficult histories such as boarding houses?	Brittany Bryant
3	Oh sounds like this may be answered as we speak.	Brittany Bryant
4	As an aspiring Native woman architect entering the workforce in the Summer, what are some critical things that you looked for in your first job or something you wished you knew?	Anonymous Attendee
5	I have a question for Cynthia. Is there anything written about indigenous women building their homes in history?	Shelley Roff
6	Just an observation - I'm delighted that the Indigenous perspective is often emphasized in the design of Tribal Cultural Centers.	Rolene Schliesman
7	As a graduate student, its been difficult finding biographies and archives on Indigenous women designers. I encourage more archiving and recording of biographies.	Anonymous Attendee	Good point! This is something that the Indigenous Architecture group might do!
8	I see many apartment style housing buildings being built here in California. I can see how this can negatively impact communities. What is your take on this? And is anything being done to tackle this within your mission and goals?	Anonymous Attendee
9	Would it be possible to contact the speakers in the future with questions?	Shelley Roff
