Reader’s Advisory

The Chronicle of Higher Education presents a case for how the pandemic will permanently change higher education—Read here: https://www.chronicle.com/article/the-pandemic-may-have-permanently-altered-campuses-heres-how

An important new digital initiative from the Getty: The Getty Research Portal has created an overview and tutorial video in response to the pandemic and a need to switch to remote teaching and learning. The video, which is approximately 10 minutes long, provides a brief introduction to the Portal’s background and virtual holdings, and demonstrates how to use it. The Portal is a free online search platform that provides access to digitized volumes on art, architecture, material culture, and related fields. With 180,000 volumes contributed by nearly forty international art libraries and museums at present, the Portal offers literature ranging from rare early publications to contemporary catalogs.

Bruce Goff and the American School of Architecture: Over the past several years the Christopher C. Gibbs College of Architecture and the University of Oklahoma Libraries have worked to preserve the legacy of Bruce Goff (1904-1982) and his students, collectively referred to as the American School of Architecture. An overview of the archive may be seen at: https://libraries.ou.edu/content/americaschool-architecture-archive .
