Reader’s Advisory

“The “Wild West” of Academic Publishing, The troubled present and promising future of scholarly communication.” by Craig Lambert, in the January-February issue of Harvard Magazine provides an interesting perspective on the challenges to academic publishing. The article ends with:

The reality is that we are printing more books today than ever before in the history of civilization—and digital books are in addition to that,” Schnapp says. “*Books are thriving now in different ways than they were 30 years ago. We need to think about how to revitalize our communications, rather than defend models that belong to the past. Print culture has undergone many such crises over its history. It’s time for rethinking and for growing. The scholarly book was overdue for redesign.
