Women Writing about Architecture Reading List 2017

Dr. Harriet Harriss (Head of MPhil/PhD Research Programmes, School of Architecture, Royal College of Art) states: “Each academic year, architecture and interior design students are issued reading lists that are largely dominated by male writers, leading them to assume that the key voices of authority within the discipline of architecture are male. This seeks to address, women writers in architecture across a whole range of architecture-related subject areas: from planning to pedagogy, technology to professional practice. Its aim is to provide a useful resource to address reading list imbalances – for institutions, educators and students alike.” See the full list at: womenwritearchitecture.wordpress.com/2017/09/15/first-blog-post/
