INTRODUCTION

The first edition of this comprehensive list of doctoral dissertations related to American architectural history was compiled IN 1992. It began quite by accident as I searched for information on dissertations on the computer at the Library of Congress related to my own dissertation topic - Thomas Ustick Walter's work on the United States Capitol. Since no comprehensive bibliography of dissertations relating to American architectural history had been compiled I decided to continue the search to complete as extensive a list as possible. I am indebted to my dissertation director, Professor Richard Longstreth of George Washington University for both urging me to complete this personal project and for offering advice on the criteria for admitting dissertations to the list. Helpful suggestions also came from Kenneth Bowling, Co-editor of the Documentary History of the First Federal Congress Project at George Washington University.

The principal criteria for inclusion in the list has been those studies dealing with the history of the built environment. Influenced by American Studies, I have expanded my list to include not only buildings but related topics such as architectural sculpture, cemeteries, dams, the social history of buildings where they show how a building type was used, and terra cotta. To this list I have added those dissertations written before 1950 on the then-current issues concerning the built environment since they now have a clear historical interest in their own right.

The primary source used for research for this bibliography was produced by University Microfilms International (U.M.I.) in Ann Arbor, Michigan. Established over 50 years ago, the U.M.I. has filmed and compiled citations of over 200,000 dissertations from the late nineteenth century to the present. Although most entries on microfilm are from American universities many are from institutions in other countries.

This compilation has been particularly tedious because the entries for architectural history are listed under a multitude of fields by U.M.I. These include American Studies, architecture, art history, business, communications, economics, education, engineering, folklore, geography, history, home economics, journalism, landscape architecture, literature, material culture, medical science, music, philosophy, physical education, political science, recreation, religion, social history, sociology, speech, theater, transportation, and urban planning. The degrees include PH.D., ARCH.D., D.MIN., D.SC., D.R., D.MUS. and ED.D.

In the first part of this bibliography dissertations are listed by year and then alphabetically by author. Each entry includes five to six lines in the following order: (1) author, (2) title, (3) degree granting institution, (4) advisor where listed, (5) the identification code needed for ordering bound copies of the dissertation, (6) the status of the dissertation (available for ordering or restricted from ordering). The identification code is divided into two parts: the Dissertation Abstracts International number (including volume, issue, and page) and the publication number. Only the publication number is needed for ordering from the University Microfilms International. One can order bound dissertations with order forms supplied by most university libraries or directly by telephone (1-800-521-3042). Under status I have included the length of those dissertations which are available. Dissertations are restricted by some universities. In some cases authors have also restricted their dissertations from leaving the institution where the degree was granted. Only in recent years, beginning in 1987, has the dissertation adviser begun to be listed. To assist the reader I have also compiled three indices - by author, the degree granting institution, and subject. The latter includes architects, builders, architectural styles, building types, geographical locations including cities, states, and regions (Northeast, Southeast, Midwest, Northwest, and Southwest), and miscellaneous subjects.

Readers should know of two other related dissertation bibliographies. The first, Bernard Carpal, editor, The Arts in America, a Bibliography (Washington, D.C.: Smithsonian Institution Press, 1979), 4 volumes, covers all fields of the arts as well as architecture. Approximately 25 dissertations related to American architectural history are found here. Second, a more helpful and specialized bibliography of dissertations devoted to American and European architectural history as well as city planning, all completed at American institutions, has recently been published: Peter Kaufman and Paula Gabbard, "Appendix, American Doctoral Dissertations in Architectural and Planning History, 1898-1972," pp. 288-304, in Elisabeth Blair MacDougall, editor, The Architectural Historian in America (Washington, D.C.: National Gallery of Art, 1990). Approximately 100 dissertations relating to American architectural history are included.

I plan to enlarge this new and comprehensive list of 420 entries of dissertations relating to American architectural history on a regular basis. Readers who are aware of pertinent dissertations which I have missed can send the name of the author, title, and approximate year to me in care of the Society of Architectural Historians in Philadelphia.

A NOTE TO THE SECOND EDITION:

In the three years since the first edition of this bibliography was compiled a number of scholars have alerted me to dissertations which I had missed. I am especially indebted to Pam Scott for sending me a list of several dozen dissertations which I had failed to include in the first edition. In the second edition, I have increased the number of dissertations on American architectural history from 420 to 609. A third edition is projected for 1998. Anyone who has additional entries can alert me at the following address:
