SAH FUND RAISING

APPOINTMENT OF DEVELOPMENT STEERING COMMITTEE

As indicated in President Placzek’s message to the membership in the February Newsletter, plans are now underway for a major fund-raising effort to help compensate for rising costs in all areas of the Society’s operations due to inflation, and to continue to expand our activities on behalf of our members. The first step has been the appointment of a Development Steering Committee. The Committee consists of: Damie Stillman, Chairman; James H. Halpin, Vice-Chairman; Paul Henderson, Robert Jorgensen, Hyman Myers, Christian Otto, Osmund Overby, William Pierson, Barbara Wriston; Rosann S. Berry and Adolf K. Placzek, ex officio. It held its first meeting on February 26, and at that meeting, the needs of the Society were examined, and strategies for the raising of funds were discussed.

A statement of the Committee’s thinking on these matters is now being prepared and it will be presented to the SAH Board of Directors at its meeting in Savannah and to the membership of the Society at the annual business meeting following the annual luncheon there. The principal recommendations will be announced in the next issue of the Newsletter. The help of every member will be needed in this effort.

Attingham Scholarship. The scholarship for an SAH member to attend the 1979 Attingham Summer School (July 3-22) has been awarded to Ellen Coxe, Maryland Historical Trust, Annapolis.

CHAPTERS

New Chapter. A petition for the formation of the Lehigh Valley Chapter of SAH was approved by the Board of Directors at their meeting on February third. (Interested members in that area should write to Nicholas Adams, 43 S. Franklin Street, Allentown, PA 18102.)

New York. Paul Byard’s lecture, “Consequences of the Grand Central Decision” was the topic of the December meeting.
Saarinen (Michigan). An organizational meeting was held in January. The next meeting will be in June. For additional information write to: Professor Linda O. Stanford, Dept. of Art, Michigan State University, East Lansing, MI 48824.

Chicago. Topics of monthly meetings are as follows: January, "Hellas"—a dazzling multi-media presentation by John Kurtich; February, "French Modern of the 19th Century: The Aesthetics of Structural Honesty"—a lecture by Frances Steiner; March, "Great Movie Palaces of Chicago and Elsewhere"—a lecture by Bill Benedict. In addition, members were treated to a January preview of the exhibition, "The Decorative Designs of Frank Lloyd Wright" at the University of Chicago.

NEWS OF MEMBERS

DONALD G. KALEC has been appointed Research Director of the Frank Lloyd Wright Home and Studio Foundation, Oak Park, IL. Photographic, correspondence, and drawing archives establish the facility as a major repository of research material on Wright's Prairie period. MORRISON H. HECKSCHER was recently appointed to the Board of Visitors of Boston University’s American and New England Studies Program. JAMES F. O’GORMAN opened the exhibition, "Hammond's Castles," at the Hammond Museum in Massachusetts with a lecture. JULIA F. DAVIS was a speaker at the conference, "Art Out-of-Doors: American Gardens 1890-1930," at the Winterthur Museum in March. CESAR PELLI spoke at the California Council/AIA’s 33rd annual conference. Two Critically Acclaimed Books

The Eads Bridge: Photographic Essay by Quinta Scott, Historical Appraisal by Howard S. Miller.

"This is a first-rate work, one that makes a powerful contribution to both the graphic arts and to historical scholarship. The Scott photographs . . . could fairly be regarded as definitive, on a par with the best architectural-structural photography I know of. Miller’s investigation of the critical question of whether steel actually was or was not employed is alone of enormous historical value."—Robert M. SCHOOLS AND CONFERENCES

A Celebration Viollet le Duc, in honor of the centennial of his birth, will be held during fall 1979 and winter 1980. In October, an international colloquium will consider Viollet le Duc's influence, and modern thought about him; it will be correlated with visits to the Chateau of Pierrefonds and the church of the Madeleine at Vezelay and with exhibits at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in Paris and at the Hotel de Sully, and will probably result in a publication of the papers presented. Write: Pierre-Marie Auzas, Inspecteur General des Monuments Historiques, Ministere de la Culture et de la Communication, 3, rue de Valois, 75042 Paris, France.

Winterthur Museum will hold a summer institute called The Decorative Arts in America, July 23-Aug. 10. This is designed for museum and historical society staff members, college and university faculty, and graduate students in American culture, art, and history. Write: Kenneth Ames (SAH), Director, Winterthur Summer Institute, Winterthur, Delaware 19735.

An intensive course in the reading of German script will be offered June 18-29 in Bethlehem, PA, as it has been annually since 1971. Visits to historic sites are available. Write: Vernon H. Nelson, Archivist, The Moravian Archives, 41 W. Locust St., Bethlehem, PA 18018.

MUSEUMS AND EXHIBITS

An exhibition of the late 19th and early 20th century architecture of Samuel and Joseph Newsom will be held at the University of California—Santa Barbara Art Museum, April 4 through May 6 and at the Oakland Museum, May 22-August 12. The exhibition will be supplemented by a tour of Newsom buildings in Southern California and by a series of lectures. A catalogue by David Gebhard (SAH), Harriette Von Breton (SAH), and Robert Winter (SAH) is available.

Visionary Drawings: Architecture and Planning opened at The Drawing Center in New York City in January.

Westfall, all SAH; Athena J. Christos and Walter Netsch, both SAH, have served on the board.

PROGRAMS

At Temple U. during Spring 79, the buildings of Philadelphia are being studied as manifestation of the city's social and cultural history, in an American Studies course taught by Richard Tyler (SAH). In San Francisco, a lecture series sponsored by the Foundation for San Francisco's Architectural Heritage began in January with a lecture by Sally Woodbridge (SAH) and Judith Waldhorn on Victorian architecture, and concludes in May with a lecture by Charles Hasbrouck (SAH) on bank buildings. A joint program on the theory and practice of architectural conservation will be sponsored in England by the major preservation societies and the Victorian Society. Learned papers, visits to sites, and assessment of government activity and policy will fill the program from June 29 to July 7. Write U.S. coordinator Pauline Metcalf (SAH), 4 E. 88th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10028.

URBAN CULTURAL PARKS

A new concept of park is taking shape in New York State. Known as an urban cultural park, it offers the means to maintain a significant urban setting which reflects the history and culture of a particular place.

As set forth in state law, an urban cultural park is "a definable urban or settled area ranging in size from a section of a municipality to a regional area with a special coherence, such area being distinguished by physical and cultural resources (natural and man-made including waterways, architecture and artifacts reflecting a period of style or cultural heritage)." The state Office of Parks and Recreation is charged with the responsibility to formulate a plan for a statewide system of urban cultural parks which involves a multi-faceted program strongly centered around historic preservation. The benefits to be derived are education through interpretation of the past, recreation and, by improving the image of a community and attracting investment, economic.

The first phase of a two-phased planning program has been completed. Nineteen communities and regional areas were designated for primary consideration in the Phase II planning. Primary areas include the New York Harbor, Sag Harbor, Kings­ton, the Hudson-Mohawk Urban Cultural Park, Saratoga Springs, Utica, Binghamton, Rochester and Lockport. Designation reflected key goals: (1) the park system should comprehensively illustrate New York's cultural heritage, (2) appropriate geographical coverage should insure that the park system is accessible to as many people as possible, and (3) the parks chosen should be feasible to manage and develop.

The outline of activity for Phase II calls for the selection of a small number of pilot areas for feasibility studies. There also will be a parallel grant program using federal, state and local funds to provide tangible benefits in as short a time as possible.

For many older urban areas, the urban cultural park program—which is based on a fourfold revitalization process consisting of preservation, recreation, education and economic development—offers an excellent opportunity to focus and harness a range of public sector programs and private capital to their benefit.

As with the existing state park system, it can be expected that the degree of state involvement will depend upon the significance of the resources and on the number of people (residents and visitors) that can benefit from the park. A potential New York Harbor Urban Cultural Park or the existing Hudson-Mohawk Urban Cultural Park (which dramatically reflects the story of the conversion of an agrarian society into an industrial society) may see the state taking an active on-site participation in park development. In areas that are more local in scale, that state's role may be limited to providing funds and technical assistance. In either case, the local role will be great, involving such elements as land use controls, municipal services, and public and private investment. This system of parks is made up not of areas set aside as static museums but of living and fully functioning parts of our urban environment.

For preservationists, urban cultural parks represent a significant urban public policy initiative based upon the values of historic preservation. Attention should be given to the future of New York's effort and supporting legislation to establish a National system of urban cultural parks which has been introduced by Congressman Ned Pattison of New York.
