ORGANIZATIONS

American Institute of Architects. The concept of a community architecture in sympathetic relationship with its users and equilibrium with its natural setting will be examined in depth at the 1974 convention of the Institute, to be held in Washington, D.C., May 20-23. Keynote speaker for the convention will be the Honorable Thomas Bradley, Mayor of Los Angeles, who will address the convention's theme, "A Humane Architecture."

International Council of Monuments and Sites. The Executive Committee has established International Specialized Committees. Consisting of a limited number of eminent experts appointed by the Executive Committee, they are given responsibility in various fields for promoting, coordinating and publicizing the results of research into techniques of preservation and restoration. The following committees have been established: Wood, Historic Towns, Documentation, Historic Gardens, Architectural Photogrammetry, Stone and Cultural Tourism. The International Specialized Committees meet regularly. Individuals interested in the above fields should contact the Secretariat de l'ICOMOS, Hôtel Saint Aignan, 75 rue du Temple, 75003 Paris, France.

A tour of historic buildings and gardens in Belgium and Holland has been arranged for the benefit of ICOMOS. Co-sponsored by the American, Belgium and Dutch ICOMOS committees, special visits with private hospitality have been scheduled for a small number of interested travelers. The tour departs New York for Brussels, September 16, 1974, and returns on October 7. This 21-day all-inclusive tour will cost $1,500.00, of which $300.00 is a tax-deductible gift. The tour has been organized under the direction of Mrs. Randolph Burgess, SAH, Dr. Richard Howland, SAH, and Robert Garvey, Jr. Contact Anne Grimmer (SAH), US/ICOMOS, Suite 430, 1522 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005.

National Historical Publications Commission. A new quarterly newsletter, Annotation, has been announced by the Commission. The newsletter will impart current information about the NHPC specifically and about historical documentary editing generally. It will also provide an opportunity for editors to inform readers of important events or particular problems.

As only a limited number of copies are being issued, NHPC requests that they be shared. Those wishing to be placed on the mailing list should write, indicating name, position and complete address. Address inquiries to the National Historical Publications Commission, National Archives Building, Washington, D.C. 20408.

SAH of Great Britain. The Alice Davis Hitchcock Medallion, given annually by the Society for an outstanding contribution to the literature of architectural history, has been awarded for 1973 to Mark Girouard for his book The Victorian Country House. He also won the medal in 1967 for his book Robert Smythson and the Architecture of the Elizabethan Era, thus becoming the first to win this award more than once. "Palladianism" was the theme of the Third Annual Symposium held March 2 at Burlington House, London.

The Society for the Preservation of Old Mills. SPOOM serves as a focal point for action and provides for the exchange of general Old Mill information. The Society publishes a magazine, Old Mill News. Published quarterly, Old Mill News features pictures, stories, lists of mills, general mill information and reports on the progress of restorations and other happenings. Membership in the Society is on a calendar year basis. Dues are $5.00 per year in the U.S.A., Canada and Mexico. All other countries are $6.00. Write to Donald W. Martin, Editor, SPOOM, P.O. Box 435, Wiscasset, Maine 04578.

Victorian Society. The Society's Study Tour, from June 21 to July 1, will visit the Welsh border country and North Wales. The tour will be directed by Jane Fawcett, Secretary of the Society, Helen Lowenthal, Co-Director of the Summer School at Attingham Park, and Hermione Hobhouse. It is hoped that
A workman bolts beams into place in the $1.7 million Museum Education Building at Old Sturbridge Village, Sturbridge, Mass. The innovative structure encloses a series of free-space studios where students perform tasks simulating early 19th century rural New England life and discuss their relationship with life today.

OHIO—AN ARCHITECTURAL PORTRAIT

Richard N. Campen

This handsomely illustrated volume provides an overview of the building in Ohio from territorial times to the present day. An essay, with personal observations, precedes over 500 well-composed photos arranged stylistically within building type. Much of Cleveland and Cincinnati is highlighted in a separate section.

Readers may be surprised to note the many notable architects who have left their mark in Ohio including Benjamin Latrobe, Chas. Bullfinch, Isaiah Rogers, Henry Roberts, Burnham & Root, Cram & Ferguson, Charles Platt, John Russel Pope, George F. Post, Bertram Goodhue, Arnold Brunner, Edw. B. Greene, McKim, Mead & White among others. The works of many Ohio architects such as Charles Schweinfurth, Milton Dyer, Hubbell & Benes, Walker & Weeks, etc. have been too little appreciated. Ohio—An Architectural Portrait fills a long-standing need. 8½” x 11” 320 pages Indices Bibliography. Hardcover $15.00.

Historic Savannah Foundation seeks any information on John S. Norris, architect, born 1805 in New York City, died 1876 in Blauvelt, New York. Norris worked in Wilmington, North Carolina in the early 1840’s where he designed and built a Customs House. He worked in Savannah 1846-1860 and is known to have designed eight buildings, including the present Customs House. Information on his heirs: Mrs. Evelina M. Simonds, Edward W. Simonds, Mrs. Eliza Keeling, Frederick C. and John W. Barlow will be helpful. Contact Mrs. Howard Morrison, Historian, Historic Savannah Foundation, Inc., 119 Habersham Street, P.O. Box 1733, Savannah, Georgia 31402.

The Octagon is planning a Bicentennial Exhibition on Dr. William Thornton, first architect of the U. S. Capitol, City Commissioner and First Superintendent of the U. S. Patent Office. Information relating to Thornton’s personal belongings, works and papers is sought. The second Bicentennial Project to be undertaken is a comprehensive exhibit on 1793 Competition for the U. S. Capitol Design. Please direct all material to Mrs. Elinor Stearns, The American Institute of Architects Foundation, The Octagon, 1799 New York Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

CHAPTERS

Chicago. “An Evening at the Cliff Dwellers” was the theme of the February 26 meeting of the Chapter. Wilbert Hasbrouck lectured on the “History of the Cliff Dwellers.” One hopes the paper will appear in The Prairie School Review in the future. “McKim, Mead and White in Naugatuck, Connecticut,” was the subject of Leland Roth’s slide lecture. Following a tour of St. Michel’s Church, John Maxwell Freedman, Professor of Architecture at the University of New South Wales, presented a lecture on “Australian Architecture and the Sydney Opera House” to the March 15 meeting of the Chapter. St. Michel’s Church was built in 1869 and only partially destroyed by the Great Fire (charred beams can be seen in the basement). It was restored in 1872 and remains substantially the same.

Latrobe Chapter of Washington. In cooperation with the Renwick Gallery, the Chapter sponsored on February 11 an illustrated lecture by A. D. Emerich. Mr. Emerich, who collaborated on the Shaker exhibition at the Renwick Gallery and compiled the exhibition’s publication, spoke on “Shaker Architecture: A Survey of the Existing Buildings.” On March 18 the Chapter heard an illustrated lecture by William Seale. “American Rooms Through the Camera’s Eye 1859-1900,” the theme of a forthcoming book, was the subject of his presentation to the Chapter. After amending the Bylaws, William Seale was elected Preservation Officer. Thus, the officers for 1974 are: Terry B. Morton, President; Denys Peter Myers, Vice President; Susan Dynes, Secretary; and Ann W. Smith, Treasurer.

Missouri Valley. Kenneth Coombs, City Architect for Kansas City, Missouri, addressed the Chapter on the restoration of Missouri’s first Capitol built in St. Charles. The lecture on March 19 was held at the University of Kansas in Lawrence, Kansas.

New York. Sarah Bradford Landau addressed the Chapter on March 5 at the Institute of Fine Arts on “New York’s West Side: Row Houses for the Prosperous.” In response to the Board of Directors’ recommendation, James Marston Fitch has been appointed Preservation Officer by Morrison Heckscher, President. At this meeting, the Bylaws were amended to support architectural preservation in the greater New York area.

Philadelphia. Meeting at The Athenaeum on March 21, George E. Thomas presented an illustrated lecture on the work of Stephen Decatur Button at Cape May, N.J.

Southern California. To supplement last issue’s notice of Harwell Hamilton Harris’ visit in Los Angeles, Helen Park has forwarded the following report:

On February 9, 1974 the Southern California Chapter’s long anticipated tour of Harwell Hamilton Harris houses in Los Angeles was successfully accomplished. Mr. Harris came out to California from Raleigh, N.C. for the occasion. Members convened at The Gamble House (the 1908 Greene and Greene masterpiece now jointly owned and operated as a living museum by the University of Southern California and the city of Pasadena) at 9:30 a.m. to board our tour bus. We proceeded to Harwell Hamilton Harris’ first house, the 1934 award winning Pauline Lowe House in Altadena—still occupied by the original owner. The satisfaction of Mr. Harris’ clients in his sensitive use of wood, the congenial interplay of inner and outer spaces, and rational domestic planning was evident all day. First and second owners eagerly joined the tour group in an enthusiastic caravan. We picnic lunched in Fellowship Park in Los Angeles on a hillside ledge beside the Harris 1945 Studio—which is just down the hill from his famous Japanese influenced Pavilion of 1935. Both buildings are occupied by appreciative young people.

We included R. M. Schindler’s Howe House of 1925 on our tour as historic counterpoint—it is directly across the street from a hitherto unrecorded and untoured Harris house of 1939—and concluded our day at Lloyd Wright’s studio with sherry and a conversation between two distinguished designers.

Tour participants were provided notes on Mr. Harris’ work prepared by the President and Treasurer of the Society with Mr. Harris.

On Sunday morning, the 10th, Mr. Harris conducted an informal student meeting in The Gamble House, using the sixty-five photographs of his work which he had sent for display in connection with our tour. That afternoon, Carleton Winslow, Vice President of the Southern California Chapter, drove Mr. Harris to San Luis Obispo where on Monday he began a week long seminar in the architectural school at California State Polytechnic University.

Helen Park, President

Western New York. The February 8 meeting was held at the Charles Burchfield Center, SUCNY at Buffalo. Mr. Goldman invited members to participate in an architectural tour of Buffalo being conducted on March 2 for an urban history class at the State University of New York at Buffalo. John Randall explained his plans to open a museum on April 21 of Sullivan and Wright artifacts at the Prudential Building. Before discussing plans for an exhibition of Buffalo architecture, a movie on Charles Rennie Mackintosh from the Roland Collection was shown.
EXHIBITS

The Octagon. The subject of the current exhibit is Artists' Views of Washington, D.C. The exhibit continues to April 28. Octagon Restoration will detail the American Institute of Architects Foundation's restoration of the house designed by Dr. William Thornton. The exhibit opens May 7 through June 9. (The Octagon, 1799 New York Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.) Hours: Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-4 p.m.; Sunday, 1-4 p.m.; closed Mondays.

The AIA Gallery. Visionary Projects is the subject of a photographic exhibit in the AIA headquarters building. The exhibit opened April 15 and extends through May 15. (The AIA Gallery, 1735 New York Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.) Hours: Weekdays, 9 a.m.-5 p.m.; closed weekends.

HISTORIC PRESERVATION

List of Experts Drawn by SAH Preservation Committee. The SAH Committee on Architectural Preservation met to conduct business in London last August 22. Richard Candee and Louise Merritt reported various sources from which a list of specialists to testify at hearings would be compiled. A form to record the topics, periods and other areas of expertise is to be circulated among the full membership. The following preliminary guidelines for use of expert witnesses in testifying in cases of conflict were proposed by James Marston Fitch: 1) identify oneself, specialty, etc.; 2) identify the nature of SAH, its scholarly basis; 3) discuss the problem in question, i.e., site, visual interest, technical achievement, architectural qualities, association with local persons and events; 4) discuss the nature of the threats, i.e., economic, social, esthetic, or administrative; 5) suggest the alternatives for use, incentives for long-range improvement, and so on.

It was determined that, pending approval of the SAH Board of Directors, each chapter would be contacted by Chairman Stephen W. Jacobs and specifically requested to appoint a preservation officer to represent the chapter on the Committee. In other action, members selected James Massey, Robert Rettig, Margot Gayle and Karel Yasko to make recommendations to restructure and formalize the Committee.

The members heard a talk by David Dowrick, specialist with the English firm of Ove Arup & Partners, on the structural restoration of several major landmarks. Committee members also inspected the vaults and roof structure of St. Paul's Cathedral, then undergoing restoration.

Preservation Briefs. A workshop known as San Francisco Victorian was recently opened at 606 Natoma Street in San Francisco by four young specialists whose aim is to provide low-cost services to restorationists of the region. The firm produces standard and custom millwork, solid bronze and cast iron hardware, ornamental glass and plaster, lighting fixtures and other supplies.

The Latta Arcade (1911) in Charlotte, North Carolina, patterned after London's Grand Central Palace Exposition Building of 1851, was restored recently. Wolf Associates received an award of merit from the North Carolina Chapter of the AIA for their work on the noted inter-block pedestrian link in downtown Charlotte.

The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities completed negotiations late last summer for the purchase of historic Bacon's Castle (c. 1655) in Surry County, Virginia. The brick manor house is believed to be the only such

A Guide to Neighborhoods and Villages

Paul Malo

This beautiful book, with its more than 100 superb photographs and its perceptive text, makes visible an awareness of the relationship of past to present, of old to new, that will give any reader, wherever he may live, new eyes with which to see his own familiar streets.

It is by no means the usual catalogue of historic buildings, although they are here in rich abundance. As Paul Malo says in his Introduction: "Old buildings are valuable not only for their association with earlier times, but also for their place in the surroundings in which we live. We have been interested in the character of residential neighborhoods, the vitality of the downtown, the scenic quality of the countryside, as well as with individual monuments of historic architecture." The focus is not on isolated "notable buildings" but on their relation to the areas of which they are an integral part.

Architectural historians will find in the text detailed historical and architectural information on the many beautiful buildings. Residents and visitors in Rochester and Monroe County will use the book, with its geographical arrangement and its clear maps, as a guide and an itinerary for walking or driving tours of the areas.

Most of the photographs in this handsome book were taken by Hans Padelt, inventor of the Graflex-XL camera, who worked on this project for more than a year. The book is sponsored by the Landmark Society of Western New York, with assistance from the New York State Council on the Arts.

property in the high Jacobean style remaining in the United States. Full restoration and furnishing is planned by APVA.

The Maryland Institute of Art plans to save the long, steel-frame shed suspended over nearly an acre of ground behind Baltimore’s Mount Royal Railroad Station (1896). The only structure of its kind known to have survived between Richmond and Philadelphia, the railroad shed is expected to be used by the Institute which purchased and restored the station in 1964. Funds are being sought for the additional project.

Last November the New York City Council passed the first major amendment to its 1965 Landmarks Preservation Law. The new legislation gives the Landmarks Commission the power to protect the classic interiors of banks, museums, theaters and other landmarks. Among potential designations mentioned are the Great Hall of the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Main Reading Room of the Public Library. Heretofore only facades of landmark buildings were protected. The amendment also provides that publicly owned open lands can be designated scenic landmarks.

The City of New York Parks, Recreation and Cultural Affairs Administration has announced the restoration of the Ladies Pavilion, designed by Olmsted and Vaux. This is the first in a program of rehabilitation for Central Park’s irreplaceable ornamental landmarks. The quality and extreme richness of the Pavilion underscore the essence of perfection to which the Park rehabilitations must aspire.

In Philadelphia, landmarks by two of America’s early architects, John Haviland and William Strickland, are threatened by obsolescence. The City Planning Commission is considering replacement of Haviland’s Eastern State Penitentiary (1825-1835) with a housing development or industrial park. Strickland’s Naval Home is to be vacated within the next year. Both complexes uniquely express different aspects of nineteenth century design in relation to their function, the one bold, dominating, the other restrained sensitivity in its park-like setting. Adaptive uses are necessary to insure the maintenance of these landmarks.

Meanwhile in neighboring Germantown, its oldest house, “Wyck,” has been assured preservation through the Germantown Historical Society. Dating from about 1690, descendants of the original family still reside in the house. The house is filled with the accumulated furnishings, papers and records of nine generations of the Wistar and Haines families. It is hoped that “Wyck” can be opened to the public this spring.

In Chicago, the battle lines are being drawn again over the Marquette Building. Already missing its cornice, the developers and the politicians want to replace Holabird and Roche’s expression of the steel frame with a plaza and sculpture. Cities don’t live, or work in voids, called plazas by the planners. It is a shame that Mies’ Federal Center will not obscure the site instead of the Monadnock Building. (See Architectural Forum, January-February 1974.)

GSA Nominates Fifteen Federal Buildings. General Services Administrator Arthur F. Sampson announced last December that, pursuant to Presidential Executive Order 11593, his agency had completed fifteen nominations to the National Register of Historic Places. In nominating the first of the historic federal buildings under its purview, GSA agrees to consider planning for the use and future disposition of the landmarks. Nominations in addition to those following will be forthcoming in the future: Agriculture Administration Building, U.S. Court of Military Appeals, District of Columbia; Post Office and Courthouse, Atlanta, Georgia; Federal Building and Courthouse, Gainesville, Florida; Custom House, Federal Building and Courthouse, Savannah, Georgia; Federal Building and Courthouse, Indianapolis, Indiana; Post Office and Courthouse, Keokuk, Iowa; Courthouse, Custom House, New Orleans, Louisiana; Courthouse, Portland, Maine; Custom House, Baltimore, Maryland; Federal Building and Courthouse, Wilmington, North Carolina; Federal Building and Courthouse, Cleveland, Ohio; Federal Building and Courthouse, Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Updated Historic Preservation Guide Due. A revised and expanded multi-volume paperback edition of the New York State Historical Association’s bibliography, Guide to Historic Preservation, Historical Agencies, and Museum Practices, is being readied for printing. The first volume, to contain approximately 260 pages of titles pertaining to the preservation movement, preservation law, urban development and redevelopment, and preservation planning, is expected to be available in April or May 1974. Copies may be obtained from the New York State Historical Association’s Fenimore Book Store or from the American Association for State and Local History.

International Centre. The International Centre for the Study of the Preservation and Restoration of Cultural Property in Rome, Italy recently welcomed Paraguay as a new member. The total membership now includes 57 countries. In other recent action, the International Centre named O. P. Agrawal as Regional Representative to coordinate activities of the Centre and arrange for missions and seminars in Asia. Mr. Agrawal is the Head of the Central Conservation Laboratory in New Delhi, India.

Philae Monuments to be Salvaged. One million dollars has been donated to Egypt by the United States to help with the preservation of the Philae monuments. Nearly inundated as a consequence of construction of the Aswan Dam, the temples will be salvaged and placed in an appropriate setting on the Island of Agilkia. The U. S. contribution to the salvage project is expected to reach $4 million over the next few years.

An uncertain future faces Adler and Sullivan’s Prudential Building, 1894-1896, in Buffalo, New York. On February 21, 1974, a fire on the tenth floor resulted in severe smoke and water damage to the upper floors, as well as minor damage to the facade. Repairs are being undertaken. However, the owners have offered the building to the public realm.
