Re: Support for the preservation of Chinchero, Peru

Dear President Vizcarra:

The Society of Architectural Historians (SAH) expresses strong support for the preservation of Chinchero, Peru, the royal estate of Topa Inca.

Chinchero International Airport is being constructed to bring more tourists to Machu Picchu, the royal estate of the Inca ruler Pachacuti. The historic site of Machu Picchu is already operating at full capacity, and is scarcely able to accommodate any more tourists. Our concern is that the placement of the new airport threatens Chinchero, another enormously significant Inca heritage site. Chinchero represents the royal estate of Topa Inca, son of Pachacuti, who expanded the Inca into one of the largest empires in the world. It is the only intact residence built by Topa Inca, and is one of the best preserved and least developed Inca heritage sites in Peru. Chinchero also contains the historic church of Our Lady of the Nativity ("Nuestra Señora de la Natividad"), a seventeenth century Spanish colonial structure erected on the ruins of an Inca temple

The pathways and roads used to move to, through, and across a diverse collection of structures, sites, and landscapes were carefully planned and constructed, and remain a defining characteristic of the Inca empire. Unfortunately, at most Inca sites, the larger cultural landscape has been erased through modern construction. Chinchero and its extensive built environment have, however, largely survived. This monumental accomplishment includes roads and pathways, as well as shrines, storage centers, and way stations. The planned airport not only threatens the destruction of Chinchero itself, it threatens to destroy the very landscape that defined the home of the Inca's greatest ruler.

The Society of Architectural Historians strongly supports the preservation of Chinchero, Peru, the royal residence of Topa Inca. Chinchero is a landmark of Peruvian heritage, one of international significance. Its preservation is essential so that future generations may appreciate it.

Sincerely,
